In the dead of winter in New England, Air conditioning is the last thing on a homeowner's mind. Come May however, the climate changes and from then until September's end air conditioners are buzzing daily all over the Northeast.

(66 Shallow Brook Lane – Glastonbury, CT)

“Hot humid summers are common and can be truly unbearable for us folks not accustomed to the heat”, states the owner of this traditional New England colonial home pictured above.

The energy savings have been great and the longevity of the equipment is phenomenal. Many of my neighbors have replaced their electric air conditioners several times already.”

The 4-ton Serval unit that cools this home was installed in 1979 and is still operating, keeping the house and its residents very comfortable throughout the muggy Connecticut summers. Residential GAS cooling offers an economical alternative for comfort, convenience and adaptability in air-conditioning today's homes.

IT offers advantages that no other system today can match:

CFC and HCFC FREE

CAN BE MULTIPLY ZONED

USES ONLY SINGLE PHASE POWER
